master SPI output pin and the SPI slave device outputs connect to the master input pin. Now that you know which side of the road to stand on, let's go ahead and define our SPI portal:

//Initialize the SPI
// Unlock Registers
EECON2 = 0x55;
EECON2 = 0xAA;
PPSCONbits.IOLOCK = 0;
// Unlock ends
// Pin Remapping
RPOR6 = 10;

//RP6 (RB3) as SDO2 (o/p)
RPOR13 = 11;
//RP13 (RC2) as SCK2 (o/p)
RPINR21 = 23;
//RP23 (RD6) as SDI2 (i/P)
// Pin Remapping ends
// Lock Registers
EECON2 = 0x55;
EECON2 = 0xAA;
PPSCONbits.IOLOCK = 1;
// Lock Registers ends

You will find the SPI portal construction code stashed in the InitializeSystem function which is part of the main.c project file. To understand what went on while the peripheral pin select system was unlocked, take a look at Figure 4. RPOR6 is actually a register that holds the value that determines which function I/O pin RP6 will perform. As you can see, the decimal 10 is loaded into RPOR6 which assigns the SPI2 Data Output function to RP6 which is really I/O pin RB3. You can see for yourself in Figure 4 and Schematic 1 what is happening with regard to register RPOR13.

The SPI portal input assignment works a bit differently. The RPINR21 register is associated with the SPI2 Data Input function. To assign the SPI2 Data Input function to a particular I/O pin, we need only to load the RPINR21 with the I/O pin numeric value. In our case, I/O pin RP23 (I/O pin RD6) becomes SDI2.

The task list for next month includes coding an SPI driver for the EA DOGM162L-A. We'll also put some digits into the PIC18F47J53's RTCC which we'll display using that EA DOGM162L-A driver. NV

The Standard for checking Capacitors in-circuit

Good enough to be the choice of Panasonic, Pioneer, NBC, ABC, Ford, JVC, NASA and thousands of independent service technicians.

Inexpensive enough to pay for itself in just one day's repairs. At $229, it's affordable.

And with a 60 day trial period, satisfaction guaranteed or money-back policy, the only thing you can lose is all the time you're currently spending on trying to repair all those dogs you've given up on.

Electronic Design Specialists

Locate shorted or leaky components or conditions to the exact spot in-circuit

Still cutting up the pcb, and unsoldering every part trying to guess at where the short is?

$229

Your DVM shows the same shorted reading all along the pcb trace. LeakSeeker 82B has the resolution to find the defective component. Touch pads along the trace, and LeakSeeker beeps highest in pitch at the defect's pad. Now you can locate a shorted part only a quarter of an inch away from a good part. Short can be from 0 to 150 ohms.

Control by USB or Web!

TCPmaker for control over the Web

Easy as 1-2-3:

1. Define Your Data, with variable names that YOU create.
2. Lay Out Your Content (with gorgeous web-ready screen controls that you can grab on to) using TCPmaker's drag & drop Visual Page Designer.
3. Generate Your Code, for all Microchip C compilers, to "wire it all together."

NO PC PROGRAMMING AT ALL – just point your web browser at your device!

Simple Upgrade Management System

Low cost integrated system manages upgrades across different processors & connectivity types:

- > Lets your end users upgrade your PIC firmware safely, simply, and securely.
- > Automatically delivers upgrade by email.
- > Simple for non-technical end users.
- > Encrypted system protects your firmware from theft or from being programmed into the wrong device.
- > Grows with your product line: for a new product w/ different processor or connectivity type, just add another SUMS bootloader.
